BOY MURDERER, HEREDITARY CRIMINAL, AND HIS MOTHER HELD FOR TRIAL.

John Garrabrandt, the self-confessed eighteen-year-old murderer of fifteenyear-old Heary Maas, or Hayes, as he was also called, was held for the Grand Jury without ball by Police Magistrate Hoos in Jersey City this morning. In court with him were his mother and Mrs. Julia Coyle, janitress of the flat where his mother lived, both accused of being accessories after the fact. They were held and their ball increased to $1,000 each.

'My son John," she said, "had been addieted to reading trashy books and papers. I think his mind was upset. He acted strangely for a long time. I am convinced he is crazy."

The women were tearful and hysterical: the lad cool and calm. He has been unconcerned ever since the arrest. He does not appear to realize his position. It was 11.30 before the Magistrate called the case. The court-room was densely crowded.

SLAYER AT THE BAR.

When Garrabrandt's name was called, under the direction of the policeman who had charge of him he walked to the rail and faced the Magistrate. He stood squarely on his feet with one hand resting on the rail; the other held his brown derby.

Throughout the entire proceedings he was cool and unconcerned and the only motion he made as he stood there was to rap against his leg with the hat. His answers were given in a clear, even Capt. John F. Kelly and other policement told of the murder, the arrest and the boy's voluntary confession.

"Do you want to ask any of these witnesses questions?" queried the Magnitrate, looking at Garrabrandt.

"No," was the stolid response.

"Do you care to make any statement with the control of the captured several prisoners. Our losses were slight.

"Hunter speaks in high terms of the gallantry of the yeomenry under Control of Thatanehu and the exceedingly strong position it held is now occupied by Rundle's division."
